The University of Melbourne Library Journal

Volume I Number 1 Autumn/Winter 1993

Welcome to the University of Melbourne Library Journal, a publication about the Library, its collections and services. The rapid rate of change in information technology combined with the growing demand for all kinds of information services, has made us realize the need to provide a vehicle for public information about our collections and services.

This aims to be an informative and practical journal: it will cover in depth selected aspects of the vast resources of the Library collections and inform the reader about new developments and new services offered by the Library.

Support from the Vice-Chancellor, the Faculties and the University Administration has enabled us to improve the range and standard of our services.

The Friends of the Baillieu Library also offer invaluable support by assisting us both in the purchase of "special treasures" for the Library collections and by providing us with encouragement and goodwill.

Recently, the Library launched UNICUS Library Services, offering information services to corporate organisations and private individuals. Revenue earned through this and the Library's other public programs is channelled back into reader service areas of the Library in order to improve and further develop collections and services.

We hope you enjoy this journal.
